

CCM's CIT Group bags major Award

By

Baibhav Mishra

Tom Martucci, CCM VP and CTO (Image Courtesy: CCM)

Consolidated Chassis Management's (CCM) CIT Group has won the Supply & Demand Chain Executive's 2021 Pros to Know award. The award recognizes outstanding executives or teams whose accomplishments offer a roadmap for other leaders looking to leverage supply chain for competitive advantage.

This year's list includes recipients from software and service providers, consultancies and academia, trucking and transportation firms, professional development agencies, sourcing and procurement divisions, and more. All of those being honored have contributed in a meaningful way to help the supply chain community at large meet the many challenges of today and prepare for those of tomorrow.

"I am proud CCM's CIT Group has been recognized for contributing to supply chain fluidity and offering a competitive advantage with our proprietary technology," said Tom Martucci, VP and CTO, CCM. "The CIT Group is built on a foundation of technology expertise supported by supply chain experience. This combination is the key to our unique asset optimization platform, which has enabled CCM to manage its chassis pools with elevated efficiency, enhanced visibility and consistent cost-effectiveness for more than a decade."

"While many companies have struggled to re-gain their footing as a result of COVID-19, this year's Pros to Know winners stepped up to the plate to deliver innovative solutions and programs in a time of crisis and need. These winners collaborated, optimized, developed, educated and played a critical role in the survival and success of their company amid a global pandemic," says Marina Mayer, Editor-in-Chief of Supply & Demand Chain Executive and Food Logistics. "I am honored to recognize these individuals and teams, and extend my utmost gratitude to everyone in the supply chain industry for their time, efforts and innovations to keep our nation's supply chains afloat."

Sea News, March 18